Who is this session for...

Everyone

Entrepreneurs, those thinking about stepping into ownership, those transitioning out of ownership. But we also feel this session is for anyone who is interested in an open and honest conversation about the business side of our profession.

Learning Objectives...

With you in mind

- Gain insight into the challenges of starting a firm or stepping into leadership roles within established firms.
- Explore how business struggles evolve, stepping out of ongoing cycles and avoiding issues with good contracts to manage the success of your firm.
- Gain insight into how various forms of diversity can affect success.
- Learn the value in early and innovative transition planning for long-term firm success.

Session Topics...

To foster the conversation

- Defining your firm, who you are and what you want to be
- Structure and evolution of business model
- Money
- Balancing Management vs Design
- Transition Planning
- Employee Retention and Growth
As Landscape Architects, we are trained in the understanding of natural systems and design of the environment. However, an in-depth understanding of the essentials of running a business is missing for many. After 25 years of practice, I have come to realize we have so much to share with our colleagues in regards to business towards enhancing the way we provide design services.

Type of work: International practice with a mix of public and private sector clients
The panel is comprised of representatives of three distinctly different landscape architecture firms, with firm size being one primary differentiator. Because we are all administering a design practice, we note commonality in the issues we face on a day to day basis. At the same time, there are distinct differences in how we respond. I think this panel will be very interesting for those in the audience who are curious to hear about the common themes and the differences.

From the beginning, we sensed that we weren’t a “normal company.” As we reached out to experts to help us determine how best to grow as a practice, we found out that there really is no such thing as a “normal company.” But, there are some “normal” business benchmarks that are helpful guides.

Mix of private and public clients.
For many years I have felt that conference conversations around business and practice “just didn’t fit me.” My firm didn’t look anything like their firms, so it was difficult to adapt their lessons learned into something useful for me. I’m here today to widen that conversation.
