

TITLE: TRANSFORMATION IN THE LANDSCAPE: A HEALING PATHWAY FOR PEOPLE AND PLACES

I. A primer of the mending offered through the landscape (15 MIN.) Todd Degner

- A. A personal story of trauma recovery and using the landscape as a tool for healing
 - 1. Discuss multiple meanings behind architectural and landscape forms
 - 2. Provide an alternative view administering mercy through the landscape

II. Current Research and Justification for the Therapeutic Design Approach (15 MIN.) Melody Tapia

- A. Current research in trauma recovery using the landscape as a tool for healing
 - 1. Evidence Based Design principles overview
 - 2. Define emotional impacts of trauma and the trauma of poorly designed space
- B. Social factors in therapeutic design
 - 1. Accommodating the vulnerable individual, family, and community in the design process

III. The Opportunity for Landscape Architects to Apply Regenerative Principles (15 MIN.) Jerry Smith

- A. Growing Marketplace demand for therapeutic spaces
 - 1. Historical progression of architectural standards in healthcare and healing
 - 2. Moving from 'doing no harm', to healing, to regenerative design
 - 3. Additional new requirements that spur transformative opportunities

IV. Strategic Design Approaches That Promote Transformation of People and Place (20 MIN.) Virginia Burt

- A. Therapeutic design forms
 - 1. Forms, stories and tools that lead to transformation
- B. Project profile of a healing space
 - 1. University Hospitals Schneider Healing Garden
 - a. Use of enclosure and motion
 - b. Use landscape devices and their application for healing and transformative narratives

IV. Concluding remarks and Q&A (25 MIN.) Todd Degner

- A. Thanks and acknowledgements
- B. Summary comments
- C. Q&A